

Continuous insolation regression gives the clearest physical cross-check

Ridge regression on log period, log temperature, log stellar radius, and log stellar mass; exact same 90 outer host folds.

Important: reported insolation is often calculated from closely related stellar and orbital quantities. The high R2 is therefore a physical reconstruction check, not independent evidence of habitability.